The geographic location

Umbria is in the center of Italy, very reachable from some of the most important cities such as Rome (which is about 170 km far from Perugia, the provincial capital), Firenze (is about 150 km far from Perugia), Siena (is about 100km far) and Bologna (is about 230 km). Furthermore, other cities as well as archaeological sites and old historical towns that make Italy famous worldwide are not far from Umbria.

Umbria is the hub of the Country.

The historical background

The history of Umbria has been made through the ages, living behind a permanent mark by different populations, from Etruscan to the Romans, and from the Medieval Age to the Renaissance until our days.

Its little villages and hill-towns (Assisi, Castiglione del Lago, Città di Castello, Foligno, Gubbio, Orvieto, Perugia, Spoleto, Terni Todi, just to name few) are the destination of thousands of tourists who comes to visit, every year, the architectural harmony of its historical buildings as the numerous monuments, Etruscan and Medieval walls, Monasteries, Churches, as well as sculptures and paintings masterpieces kept in the museums of the region.

Umbria can be considered the “mirror” of these Italian history.

The landscape features

The Umbria landscape is still a largely unspoiled region of rolling hills, woods, streams and valleys where visitors can still smell the scent of nature. The placid lapping blue water of the Trasimeno Lake oversight-seeing the western side of the region to join the hills landscape on the east ending with the Pennines mountains.

Umbria is well-known for its National Parks such as National Park of Sibillini Mountains, Colfiorito heritage or Trasimeno Lake National Reserve and the Tiber River Park), which are very popular between tourists visiting the region all year round.

Umbria is the land of meditation and of the inspiring thoughts listening to the silence of the nature.

The numerous Monasteries and Abbeys widespread all over the region give to visitors good vibes of spirituality and religious suggestion being away from the noise of the metropolis.

Cultural and leisure amenities

Umbria is a region with countless important cultural and social events known at national and international level (as Umbria Jazz, Festival dei due Mondi, Festival delle Nazioni, Corsa dei Ceri and the Infiorata during spring-time) which are bringing back to life villages and hill-towns.

Umbria is a land full of those opportunities to experience and enjoy at any age.

The history of Umbria is mirrored in any villages, hill-towns, churches and city-squares, monuments and in any local museums little ancient objects: from Umbrii tribes to Etruscan and from Romans to Longobardi's domination, and from the Renaissance masterpieces to the masters of the twentieth century.

Umbria stands out for a large number of local museums, cultural heritages, art galleries, spread across the territory, from the scientific ones to the archaeological ones to ethno-anthropological ones.

Furthermore, every year, are also being carried out important exhibitions together with major cultural events that are organized to promote the cultural heritage as well as the territory of the region at a national and at international level.

Umbria offers a varied theatrical season, essential component to promote the development and dissemination of culture as well as supports the production and the use of performances within the region. The Region supports the Foundation of “Teatro Stabile dell’Umbria”, which releases an interesting prose and dance season spread across the regional territory.

Umbria promotes the dissemination of musical, lyric and choral cultures, preserving the popular tradition.

The High School for Linguistic Mediators of Perugia (SSML) opened in 1976 in the provincial capital of Umbria, named “European High School for Interpreter and Translator. At the very beginning, the School aimed to be internationally recognized to provide students with a title of Interpreter and Translator, two professional figures not very well known until then, nowadays known as Linguistic Mediators.

After nearly a decade by the first opening the SSML has obtained, thankfully also to the National University Council, the power to release Degree as Linguistic Mediators, thorough the 1989 may the 19th Law released by the Ministry of Education. However, is only on the 31st July 2003 that the SSML gains the power to release equivalent degree to the one issued by Science of Linguistic Mediation Universities.

Thanks to this important recognition, nowadays students may hold a Degree equivalent to the others released by the Italian and European Universities enabling them to get international jobs in different working sectors where is required a knowledge of foreign languages.

To give much more opportunities, also to fresher students, the SSML doubled the strength to culturally professionally train future language mediators providing them with new cultural instruments.

Nowadays the SSML guarantees numerous professional qualifications and qualified jobs ranging from the free-lance carrier (Interpreter, translator, touristic guide), or working with PA (public administration Bodies, Town Halls, Regional Offices, Embassies, Justice Courts, Army) and to work on the private sector as International Factories, Sailing companies, airports, tour operators, Travel Agencies, Solicitors, Translations’ Agencies).
